

The 3-minute Game
(for 2 people)

Dr. Betty Martin
www.bettymartin.com

Two questions, each one an offer.

Take turns offering to each other (in any order):

- Offer #1: How would you like me to touch you for three minutes?
 - Please scratch my back, kiss my neck, bite my toes, hold me, etc.

- Offer #2: How would you like to touch me for three minutes?
 - May I feel your arms, explore your back, play with your hair, etc.
 - Do not offer to "give" anything, like a massage. This is for your pleasure.

When you make the offer, you are giving a gift. Negotiate as needed. Never give more than you are happy to give.

Each of the four rounds of the game creates a different role for you.

You are either doing or being done to, and it's either for you or for them.

These two factors combine in four ways:

- you are doing and it's for them
- you are doing and it's for you
- you are being done to and it's for you
- you are being done to and it's for them

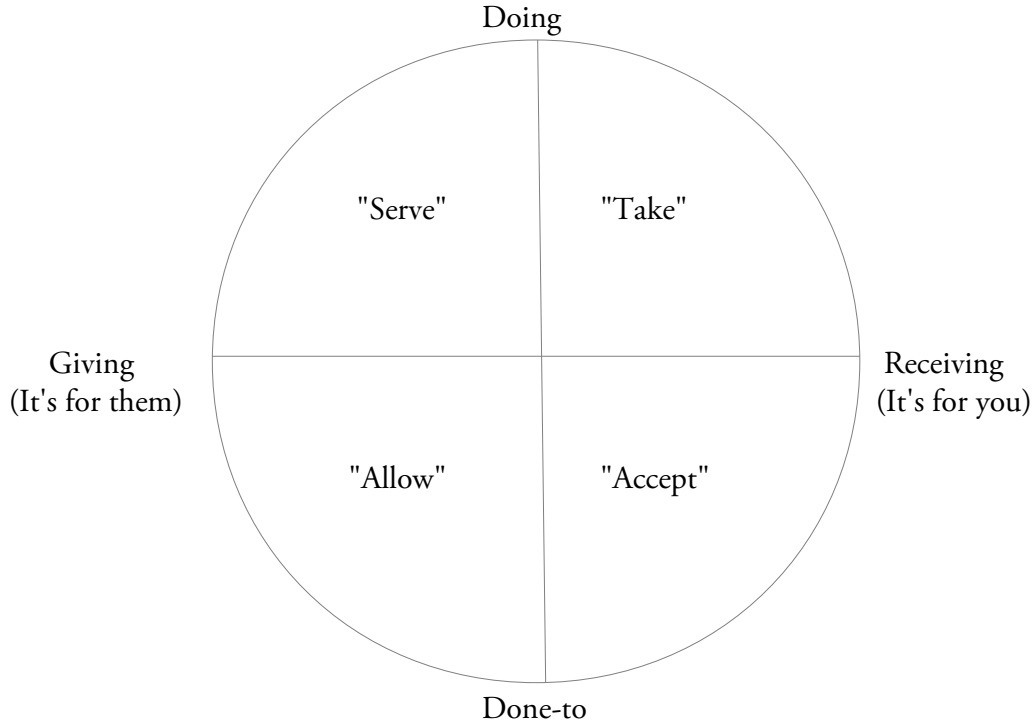

Each of the four is enjoyable and challenging in different ways, will teach you something different about yourself, and will access a different aspect of yourself and your sexuality.

The point is to distinguish between them. Ask yourself: Who is this for?

Go slowly, start with short turns and neutral (non-sexy) body areas.

[See last page for step-by-step advice on all four rounds of the game.]

The two factors overlap like this:

Consent (your agreement) creates the quadrants. Without agreement about who it's for, the quadrants do not happen.

Outside this wheel of consent,

- instead of consensual serving: martyrdom, burnout, depletion
- instead of consensual taking: assault, rape, groping, creepiness
- instead of consensual accepting: laziness, selfishness, addiction, dependency
- instead of consensual allowing: resentment, victimhood, doormat status

Serving

Most people call this "giving" but this is not the only kind of giving. Allowing is also a form of giving.

To Serve:

1. Set aside what you prefer (including the response you hope to see).
2. Ask what your partner wants - and wait for the answer. Making spaciousness for their choice is the most important part.
3. Decide if you are willing and able to do that. Honor your limits. Ask yourself: "Is this something I can give with a full heart?"
4. If it is, do so as best you can.
5. You contribute to their experience. The gift you give is your action.

Essence: Taking action for the benefit of others.

Taking

Hard for almost everyone. Usually feels odd, elusive, or scary. Taking is receiving the gift of access, a true gift. In order to receive this gift, you must stop trying to "give".

To Take:

1. Ask your partner what their limits are and abide by them, completely.
2. Take the time to notice what part of them you would like to feel.
3. Ask "May I...?" not "Would you like...?"
4. Use your hands to feel - not to serve. Move slowly; the slower you go the more you feel. Feel for the shape and texture.
5. When you start trying to give to them, remind yourself it's for you.
6. Say thank you!

Essence: Taking action for your own benefit.

Allowing

Very easy for some, very hard for others. Depends on knowing you have a choice about what happens to you. Allowing is a form of giving. The gift you give is access to you.

Set aside what you would prefer.

Keep your responsibility for your limits.

To Allow:

1. Take time to consider your limits. Ask yourself: "Is this a gift I can give with a full heart?"
2. Wait for a resounding inner "Yes!"
3. If you are hesitant, it's one of these:
 - you need more information
 - it's a "No" waiting for you to hear it
 - there is some limit within which you would be happy to give. Ask yourself what that is.

Essence: Allowing others to take action, while keeping your own limits.

Accepting

Most people call this "receiving", but this is not the only kind of receiving. Taking is also a form of receiving.

To Accept:

1. Put yourself first. Set aside what you are OK with. Go for wonderful.
2. Take all the time you need to notice what it is you'd like. This is the most important part, and often the hardest.
3. Ask as directly and specifically as you can. No hinting, no maybe's, no "whatever-you-want-to-give".
4. Stop trying to "give" your giver a good experience. That's their job.
5. Change your mind any time (and ask for something different).
6. Say thank you!

Essence: Receiving the benefit of actions of others.
